Third Sunday in Ordinary Time—27th January 2013

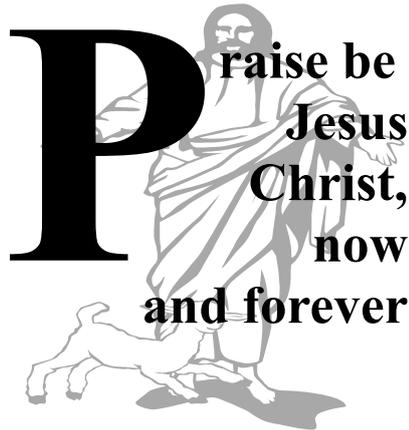

Quite often now, during the Church's Year, we are asked to mark different occasions, seasons and even lifestyles. In fact, this entire year has been deemed a "Year of Faith". This week we are asked to focus our thoughts on the link between our schools and the handing on of the Catholic Faith.

This week calls us to reflect on the fine work done in our schools to share the faith, while respecting those who might come from different traditions. Great credit is due to our teachers who help in no small way to share the Gospel message and Church's vision with a new generation - a new continent, as Pope John Paul described those to be evangelised.

We think then of all involved in the education of our younger children and teenagers and commit ourselves to doing all in our power to hand on to them the finest of our traditions and the essentials of our faith. It is not the task of a few but the call for all. We recognise during the week the central roles played by parents, grandparents, teachers, community, peers and all who, in any way, seek to hand on the faith so that it can be our starting point and guiding light in life.

God bless the work
